The image shows two rectangular metal trays filled with smoked fish, resting on a rustic wooden table. The tray on the left contains several whole, small fish, likely trout or salmon, arranged in a row. The tray on the right contains larger, flat fish, possibly sea bream or similar, which have been split open and are being held together by metal tongs. The fish in both trays have a rich, golden-brown color, characteristic of smoking. The background is a blurred outdoor setting with green foliage.
